A birthchart cannot be duplicated within a period of less than twenty-five thousand years. All the planets are traveling at different speeds around the Sun, and it takes more than twenty-five thousand years for all of them to line up the same way twice. Consequently, in terms of the astrology chart, each individual is totally unique.

Astrology is not a study of general truth but rather a key to specific knowledge that can unlock the power of one's inner self. A common denominator of all astrologers is the use of the basic mathematical tools of the planets, signs, and houses.

There are as many different approaches to interpreting the astrology chart as there are astrologers. This is because each Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening us is unique, and the astrologer brings the dimension of himself or herself to the science and to the interpretation of the basic symbols.

The meaning of the birthchart is filtered through the biases and basic outlook on life of the astrologer who is interpreting. For this reason the validation of your inner self is the ultimate judge of the accuracy and completeness of the insights offered you, as is the case with psychiatry, psychology, and any of the other social science approaches dealing with the uniqueness of a human being. Different astrologers see different things when they look at a birthchart.

Consequently, I wish to share some basic premises I hold about life as a whole, my biases, so that you will know consciously the filter through which this information is being presented. I also want to share Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening goals in coauthoring this book and the practical benefit that I feel it can be to the reader. Many people believe that everything in astrology is predestined, that free will is precluded. In fact, quite the opposite is true.

The astrology chart is simply a picture of the inner person just as the physical body is a picture of the outer person. Without boundaries there is no free will or choice; there is nothing to choose between. Your physical body, though it grows and matures, remains essentially the same. It is still your body, unique from others on Earth and the only body you have. In the same way, the astrology chart pictures your intangible body.

It is a picture of your inner being, unique from everyone else on Earth and the only inner being that you have. The tangible aspects of a person, the body, can be seen physically. The intangible aspects of a person, the being within Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening body, can be seen mathematically through the astrology chart.

It is how we use what we have that the area of free will, or choice, enters in. Physically, we are aware of choice. We know what actions lead inevitably to pain, and if we do not want pain, we do not do those actions.

On the intangible level the guideposts are just as inevitable, yet not as obvious except through mathematical tools that can display the energies graphically, such as astrology.

For Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening, if you were to start your automobile, "rev it up" to forty miles per hour, and drive into a brick wall, you know that would inevitably lead to pain. There is no way of getting around it, pain would be an unavoidable consequence of taking that action. The only difference is that we are not as aware of the connection between cause and consequence when it is not on the strictly physical level. Astrology is a means of becoming aware of that connection on the intangible levels of experiencing oneself.

Psychologically, we are doing things just as foolish as driving a car into a brick wall and then wondering, What went wrong?

Why isn't life supporting me? I use astrology as a means for objectively getting in touch with brick walls for myself and others. I'd like to share with you what I'm actually "up to" with astrology. I'm interested in experiencing happiness while on planet Earth, so for me astrology is a tool, not an end in itself. The first thing I notice about personal happiness is that most Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening the people on this planet don't believe in it.

Most of us are operating consciously or unconsciously out of a belief structure that says life is about suffering. We therefore go along with major compromises in our lives: we give away bits and pieces of ourselves; we stay in self-destructive situations; we give up our heart's dreams until one day we cash in all our chips and out we go. I have no retention of being on this planet or any other if I'm not going to enjoy myself and feel all the love of the universe flowing through me in a way that works for me and for everyone around me.

The challenge is creating personal happiness on a planet that doesn't believe in it. In order to do this realistically, the first thing we need to do is get in touch with the laws of happiness operating here and begin to cooperate with them rather than resist them.

The most important thing to notice about happiness is that all the joy we have ever experienced on this planet has been felt in one place and one place only: inside our own hearts. That's where we have experienced happiness, and that's where the source of it is. Personal happiness is a by-product of the times when our minds are centered inside the heart.

When the mind is inside the heart, it's happy because it's home. There are certain materialistic experiences, common to most of us, that can temporarily produce that state of happiness. One of these experiences Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening falling in love. If you have never fallen in love, the experience of infatuation is an Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening facsimile.

Before you fall in love your mind runs around Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening you, "If only I get this, then I'll be happy"; "If only I get that, then I'll be happy"; "If only that person will go along with me, then I'll be happy. Well, since the mind is not programmed to handle love, as soon as you feel it, it "pops" the mind from its attachment to the world back into the heart center where it is naturally attached and for a while you're happy because for a while you're "home."

There is a feeling that everything is "right," regardless of what seems to be happening in the external environment. When shopping at the supermarket, if somebody bumps into your cart, you don't mind. You just flow with it. If you happen to pass people arguing with each other, you still feel love. You may stop to help, but you don't stop feeling the joy inside yourself to do it. And you don't become less effective.

You still work and play and wash your hair, and do all the things you normally do, but everything has a feeling of magic about it, a feeling of joy. This is your birthright. Living in this state of consciousness is how it's supposed to be for all of us, all the time.

It's natural. Now we all know that the happiness you experienced when you were in love had nothing to do with the other person because if the other person stays around long enough, the mind goes out and tries to change the other person. The moment it does that, it leaves the heart center, and the restlessness, the sense that something is "missing," comes back.

There are other materialistic experiences that can temporarily produce happiness. Reaching a goal is a good example. Let's say you want to make a million dollars. So one day you wake up, look at your checkbook, and it says "plus one million dollars."

And for a while you are happy. That happiness lasts until the mind becomes restless and begins to say, "Well, if a million made us this happy, think how happy two million will make us. Probably twice as happy! When it does that, it leaves the heart center, and the unhappiness comes back, the incompleteness, the feeling that Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening has to happen" in order for you to be happy again.

Other things can temporarily produce happiness, such as a moment of beauty in nature. Seeing someone do something nice for someone else, with no motive for Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening gain, can produce joy as the mind tiles back into the heart again. But then you walk a little farther down the street and see a neighbor kicking a dog, and the mind goes out to make a judgment.

The moment it does that, it leaves the heart center, and the unhappiness, the vague dissatisfaction, returns. So obtaining personal happiness has to do Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening getting the mind to go into the heart Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening and remain there.

But everything is approached from a feeling of lightness, of "play," because we already have what we need: that feeling of internal happiness. Two basic approaches can bring this state of consciousness about on a permanent basis. One is some form of meditation. Meditation works because on a daily basis it takes the mind away from its habit of attachment to the world, turns it inward to the heart, and gently says: "Here's where the happiness is; it's inside, not outside."

With proper meditation, the power of contacting reality within yourself for even twenty minutes a day can grow so strong that you can spend the remaining twenty three hours and forty minutes of the day out in the world without losing the feeling of assurance and inner joy.

In the second approach to claiming personal happiness on a permanent basis and there's no reason not to use both approaches simultaneously we have to ask ourselves: Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening does the mind go outward to begin with? When you were in love, why did the mind go out and try to Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening the other person? When you reached a goal, why did the mind go out and immediately try to reach another one?

When you had a high meditation and felt joyous, why could somebody "push your buttons" and send you out again? This has to do with basic imbalances reside the mind itself that are karmic, stemming from past life patternings and tendencies.

Astrology is the fastest, most precise technique I know for getting in touch with those imbalances on an individual basis and making the corrections. That's why I use astrology.

Because each of us is so totally unique, an individual astrological reading is required in order to see the overall pattern in your life, stemming from past lives that is seeking to be corrected so bliss can be obtained permanently. Knowledge of the pattern is obtained through a synthesis of the factors that need purification in each of your planets, signs, and houses. As each of these factors is purified individually, Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening entire inner structure becomes harmonized and resolved.

It is for this reason that I have divided each of the planets into the "static" and "dynamic" categories as they travel through each of the signs. The "static" category is a picture of past life tendencies, habitual karmic responses that result in personal defeat and isolation from inner joy. The "dynamic" category suggests Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening purification process that can provide Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening antidote for the specific past life self-defeating tendency.

It really challenged me to the point of swearing as it poked and prodded at my habitual ways of doing things and really called for me to change. Highly recommend but not for the faint hearted. Feb 07, Kutjupa Karyn rated it it was amazing. Very interesting I did not know about prenatal eclipses and how they effect our lives before I read this book.

Explains so much! May 02, Jenny G added it. I think this has some interesting concepts and makes for a good reference book for those who are Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening in astrology.

Jul 05, Artemis rated it really liked it. Definitely worth reading and keeping as a reference!!! What I loved the most about this book Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening the second part of this book. Which talks about luna and sol eclipses. Second favourite part of this book is the fact Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening very real, it talks about real issues! There's some deep real talk in this book. May 28, Miranda Feneberger rated it it was amazing.

Aug 06, Kate Mcphail rated it really liked it. Found this very useful. Had never considered the influence of prenatal solar and lunar eclipses. Great book!!!! Jan 12, E. I picked this up after Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening to a "Meet the Author" podcast featuring Eleanor Catton, Man Booker prize winner for her book Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening Luminaries"; partly because it was the most recommended astrology book available in the bookstore I was in and I thought it might help inform my reading of Catton's book, and partly because the bookstore I was in didn't have Catton's book in stock and I wanted to purchase something.

Astrology has always been a general interest of mine; perhaps not a set of beliefs I picked this up after listening to a "Meet the Author" podcast featuring Eleanor Catton, Man Booker prize winner for her book "The Luminaries"; partly because it was the most recommended astrology book available in the bookstore I was in and I thought it might help inform my reading of Catton's book, and partly because the bookstore I was in didn't have Catton's book in stock and I wanted to purchase something.

Astrology has always been a general interest of mine; perhaps not a set of beliefs I subscribe to entirely, but an interest nonetheless, particularly when analyzed through a historical lens.

Using this book to complete my Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening chart was actually kind of enjoyable--learning approximately where the planets were located at the time of my birth, and how that may have influenced the energies beneath which I was born.

I think astrology Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening be kind of hit-or-miss though, and after digging deeper into the analysis of each planet and their potential influences, I found this book didn't really speak to me as much as I had hoped. I was born on a "cusp" date--between Aries and Taurus, so that may have had something to do with it, but even when looking at both signs everything seemed a little off.

Perhaps I am more close-minded than I thought, or perhaps I am far more influenced by my "nurturing" rather than by "nature". Either way, I think a bit of self-exploration every once in awhile can be valuable, and this book certainly provides such an opportunity. Thank you! So interesting. This book provides quite enough materials to me to review my life and helps me to understand well my lesson.

Why do I feel bad or joy? What do I Spiritual Astrology: A Path to Divine Awakening need to concern about.? Follow my destiny, the door will open!!! Jul 14, Shavawn Berry rated it it was amazing. A treasure trove of Astrological information written in clear, understandable language for the lay person.

Really fun to explore and see what each planet, house, sign, aspect, etc. I found this at the local Savers and got it for a couple of bucks! What a treat. Sep 13, Jonathan Muldrew Sr.

This was a great read and as for me a great tool for beginning to understand different aspects within astrology Jun 18, Mary Plaisance rated it it was amazing Shelves: enlightenment. MY all time favorite astrology book. Aug 11, Ashley rated it it was amazing There's much enjoyment having learned the information presented in this book.
