I look forward to following your posts on this an many other topics. Routledge Intensive Dutch publisher's website. I remember vaguely! Apparently, they moved the little extra material on these sites to eResources pages of the respective titles. At least, the Russian course still has its companion site. When I asked about it, I was told there was a problem but they never got back to me later. It is fast-paced, providing students with a wide range of activities, and draws on a lively selection of sources from many media.

The coursebook has been redesigned and updated to provide new cultural materials, and for the first time, audio materials are freely available on a companion website. Taking students from beginner to intermediate level in one year, the Routledge Intensive Dutch Course develops a thorough working knowledge of the structures of Dutch and practices the four key skills of language learning. This course will provide students with an understanding of both Dutch and Flemish culture. An answer key is supplied online for all relevant exercises. Guidance for tutors, as well as links to related sites is available on the Routledge website. We don't have it in the book and I can't find it online. It seems that it not available anymore. Another thing that really annoys me about this book is that you have to look up virtually all the vocabulary words yourself in the glossary or a dictionary, rather than having a certain vocabulary to master provided in each chapter.

There is a vocabulary section at the end of the chapter, but it contains only a very small number of the words actually used in the chapter. Looking everything up slows down the learning process and makes it feel cumbersome. So, while this book may well be good for use in the classroom, I cannot recommend it for those who are attempting to learn Italian on their own. I would recommend Proudfoot's Modern Italian Grammar, however, if you want to come to serious grips with grammar. I wish I had better suggestions for self-instruction than the usual Pimsleur, Barron's, etc. We use cookies to offer you a better browsing experience.
